

un.

EDITORIAL

Kyla McFarlane & Patrice Sharkey

3

ARTICLES

WALKING IS NOT A MEDIUM, IT'S AN ATTITUDE

Liang Luscombe

6

ART-ARCHITECTURE

Esther Anatolitis

18

DO LEAVE ME THIS WAY... KEITH HARING'S DIFFICULT PRESENCE IN COLLINGWOOD

Andrew Atchison

36

THE ABORIGINAL TENT EMBASSY: ALIENS ON AUSTRALIA'S DOORSTEP

Sven Knudsen

62

ARCHITECTURE ON THE FRINGES OF LEGALITY: SANTIAGO CIRUGEDA & KYOHEI SAKAGUCHI

Jason Workman

98

COLLABORATIONS

BAPTIST PLACE: THREE RESPONSES

Jan Bryant, Katie Lee & Nigel Smith

40

SUSPENSION TEST FOR THREE VOICES

Adrien Allen, Hélène Frichot & Bridie Lunney

82

INTERVIEWS

ART-ARCHITECTURE: YURT

Tom Melick interviews David Harris

26

EXHUMING THE ARCHIVE: INTERVIEW WITH ROSSELLA BISCOTTI

David Homewood

56

A CONVERSATION WITH SIMON MAIDMENT, DIRECTOR OF SATELLITE ART PROJECTS

Trent Walter

90

HAMMER TIME: TRANSCENDING GEOGRAPHY

Tim Hillier

104

REVIEWS

THE SPACE BETWEEN: ROOM FOR PLAN B

Brad Haylock

14

SLAVE PIANOS / PUNKASILA / PIPELINE TO OBLIVION:

THREE PROJECTS BY DANIUŠ KESMINAS

AND COLLABORATORS

Dylan Rainforth

30

INTERIOR ARCHITECTURE

Victoria Duckett

50

MIS-DESIGN

Leon Goh

53

WE ARE HERE, BUT WHO ARE WE, REALLY?

Rebecca Conroy

76

WITHIN & WITHOUT

Hugh Nichols

80

FOOTSCRAYISM

Kyle Weise

93

THE QUIET VOLUME: CIUDADES PARRALELAS

Madeleine Hodge

108

CATCHING TRUCKS

Miri Hirschfeld

110

ARTISTS' PAGES

DISPLACEMENT DRAWINGS (1-4)

Lachlan Petras

48 / 96

REFERENCE MATERIAL (JEWELLERY BOX, JEWELLERY BOX #2, JEWELLERY BOX #3)

Max Creasy & John Wardle

70

MENDED GORDON MATTA-CLARK

Nic Tammens

79

HOTEL DRAWINGS

Kirsty Hulm

115 un Magazine 5.2

ISSN 1449-6747 (print)

ISSN 1449-955X (online)

Published by un Projects Inc.

un Projects

PO Box 24085, Melbourne, VIC 3001

admin@unmagazine.org

www.unmagazine.org

Editor (issues 5.1 & 5.2)

Kyla McFarlane

Sub-editor (issues 5.1 & 5.2)

Patrice Sharkey

Project Coordinator

Melody Ellis

Designer

Brad Haylock

Printing

BPA Print Group

Paper

Sovereign Offset 250gsm (cover)

Sovereign Offset 120gsm (text)

Magazine Advisory Committee

Ulanda Blair, Angela Brophy, Amelia Douglas, Tessa Dwyer, Rosemary Forde, Brad Haylock, Phip Murray, Lisa Radford and Zara Stanhope

Mentors

Ulanda Blair, Angela Brophy, Jared Davis, Phip Murray and Lisa Radford

Board

Annabel Allen (Treasurer), Angela Brophy, Rosemary Forde, Bill Gillies, Brad Haylock, Din Heagney, Phip Murray and Zara Stanhope (Chair)

un Magazine Supporters

Helen Brack

Cover

Nathan Gray

outside: moire study (for un) 1 2011

inside: moire study (for un) 2 2011

digital images

courtesy the artist and Utopian Slumps

© Copyright 2011 un Magazine and the authors, artists, designers, photographers and other contributors. No part of this publication may be reproduced without permission from the editor and publisher. The opinions expressed in un Magazine are those of the contributing authors and not necessarily those of the editor or publisher.

un Magazine is assisted by the Victorian Government through Arts Victoria, and by the Australian Government through the Australia Council, its arts funding and advisory body.

Distribution

un Magazine is available online from: www.unmagazine.org

Printed copies available from:

Melbourne

Centre for Contemporary Photography, Conical, Craft Victoria, Gertrude Contemporary, Kings ARI, Monash University Museum of Art, Paradise Hills, RMIT School of Art Gallery, VCA Margaret Lawrence Gallery, West Space

Sydney

Artspace, Firstdraft, ICAN, MOP Projects, Museum of Contemporary Art, The Paper Mill, Performance Space

Adelaide

Australian Experimental Art Foundation

Hobart

Contemporary Art Spaces Tasmania, Inflight

Brisbane

Boxcopy, Gallery of Modern Art Bookstore, Institute of Modern Art

Perth

Perth Institute of Contemporary Art, Fremantle Arts Centre

Canberra

Canberra Contemporary Art Space

Darwin

24hr Art

International

The Physics Room (Christchurch), ProQM (Berlin), mzin (Leipzig), Printed Matter (New York), Para/Site (Hong Kong), Section 7 Books (Paris), Raid Projects (Los Angeles)

Kyla and Patrice thank un Magazine 5.2's contributors for their creative and critical responses to the issue's editorial focus — and for their grace and patience during the editing process.

We extend our appreciation to the many people that commit significant time, energy and hard work to un Magazine: the Advisory Committee; un Projects administrator Melody Ellis; the mentors and the un Projects Board, whose ongoing commitment to the magazine is inspiring. We are grateful to the Board for the opportunity to take the reins of volume 5. We also value the opportunity to collaborate with Brad Haylock (Monash University). We thank him for his expert art direction and design.

Thanks also go to Platform for providing a much-needed production and meeting space, and to Phip Murray and Angela Brophy for proofreading. We are most appreciative of BPA Print Group's quality printing, and extend thanks to K.W. Doggett Fine Paper for their generous support and excellent paper. Finally, thank you to the team at West Space for hosting the launch at their new premises.

Interior Architecture 2011
installation view
La Trobe University Visual Arts Centre
Photo credit: Clare Rae

INTERIOR ARCHITECTURE

La Trobe University Visual Arts Centre, Bendigo

June 16 – July 24, 2011

Curated by Caroline Phillips

Victoria Duckett

Interior Architecture brought together eight very different artists who employed a range of processes and materials in their exploration of the body in space. What was refreshing about this exhibition was the fact that architecture was examined in relation to the lived body of the artist. Since contemporary discussions about architecture tend to either explore its relationship to media or (more concretely) the built versus the natural environment, it was significant that each artist instead examined architecture in the context of their personal experience of space.

Surprisingly, this turn to personal space did not result in a visually disjointed show. The works instead complemented each other. There were the shared hieroglyphic configurations of Kate Just's and Julie Shiels's installations, where a series of sculptural forms invited symbolic — or at least metaphoric — inquiry. There was also the shared suspension of Clare Rae's and Timothy Kendall Edser's bodies in their photographs; the shared grey tendril in Caroline Phillips's foam sculpture and Catherine Evans's inkjet print of the neck of a dead swan; and the shared box-like configuration of Inez de Vega's metal cabinet (opening onto her video) and Mark Friedlander's sculptural cubes (opening onto his hallway). Above all, the works shared a minimalist aesthetic. It was only the red threads encased within Shiels's resin and the coloured tights that Rae wore in two of her photographs that moved us outside the predominance of white, black and grey.

Within this apparently cohesive minimalist setting, contradictions and contrasts between works emerged. The poetic fragility of Evans's inkjet print, propped on the floor, saw the curved sway of the swan's neck fall into a small sculptural cone of molten clay. This contrasted, most obviously, with Friedlander's low line of heavy steel squares which literally blocked and bound space, suggesting not just physical entrapment but forcing the viewer onto the floor in order to look through it. In a similar fashion, the arresting bleakness of de Vega's black and white video animation, which showed roughly sketched figures linked by a confronting, first-person dialogue about institutional mental health care, was exhibited on a flat screen within the top drawer of a scrappy, medical-type filing cabinet. Such rawness ran counter to the symbolic animation of Just's polished black keys stretching, almost whimsically, across the white gallery wall. Even small details vied with each other: Shiels's red cotton, twisted imperfectly with cotton-wool and held within the moulds of keyhole surgical tools, contrasted with the vertical pull of the wires holding Edser's body in its own 'medical' mould. Finally, Phillips's hanging grey strands were pulled into a trio of entwined ponytails near a corner of the gallery. This work, recalling at once the disordered nonchalance of girlhood and domestic divisions (the curtain, the blind) contrasted with the scope and scale of Rae's more childlike and physical measurement of interior domestic space.

Because of this contrast between works, I was forced to keep negotiating and shifting my interpretation of what an 'interior architecture' might actually be. Was it a mythical or medical interior? A playroom or a space that could only be spoken? Was it a grown-up space or a space we might still grow into? Was I looking back or looking in? Could I scan a horizon? Was there an outside? What was I asked to feel?

Clearly, these questions indicate that Interior Architecture did not define 'the interior' or 'architecture' in a concrete or cogent way. I actually quite liked this: realised in this mix was a phenomenological discussion about meaning being spatially and temporally embodied by a subject who lives in a specific place and time, and who has, therefore, to negotiate other bodies often in conflict with her/himself. In her opening to Carnal Thoughts: Embodiment and Moving-Image Culture, Vivian Sobchack states that 'however direct it may seem, our experience is not only mediated and qualified by the lived bodies that we are, but our lived bodies (and our experience of them) is always also mediated and qualified by our engagements with other bodies and things', reminding us of what she calls our 'historical and cultural asymmetries'.¹ How we make sense of the world involves not just content and form, space and structure, but our capacity to engage descriptions of phenomenological experience that are not our own. To do this, we do not need to share that experience but have it described in a manner that resonates with, and is comprehensible to us. In this context, I would argue that it was the clarity of artistic difference — more than a shared minimalist aesthetic — that held Interior Architecture together.

1. Vivian Sobchack, Carnal Thoughts: Embodiment and Moving-Image Culture, University of California Press, Berkeley and Los Angeles, 2002, p. 5.

Victoria Duckett lectures at the Centre for Ideas, Victorian College of the Arts and Music, University of Melbourne.

above:
Interior Architecture 2011
installation view
La Trobe University Visual Arts Centre
Photo credit: Clare Rae